

Arch Coal To Acquire ICG for $3.4 Billion

May 2, 2011 7:31 AM ET

Arch to Become Second Largest U.S. Metallurgical Coal Producer Only U.S. Coal Producer with Assets in Every Major Domestic Coal Basin Increases Reserve Base by 25 Percent to 5.5 Billion Tons Expected Annual Synergies of $70 Million to $80 Million Transaction Expected to Be Accretive to Earnings in 2012

ST. LOUIS and SCOTT DEPOT, W.Va., May 2, 2011 -- Arch Coal, Inc. (NYSE:ACI) ("Arch" or "the company") and International Coal Group, Inc. (NYSE:ICO) ("ICG") today announced that they have signed a definitive agreement under which Arch will acquire all of the outstanding shares of ICG for $14.60 per share, in an all-cash transaction valued at $3.4 billion. The combined company will be the second largest U.S. metallurgical coal supplier and a top-five overall global coal producer and marketer. Arch will have a balanced metallurgical ("met") and thermal coal portfolio with unparalleled operational diversification in every major U.S. supply basin and the No. 1 or No. 2 position in each of its three core operating regions.

"The acquisition of ICG is a significant strategic step that strengthens Arch's position as a world-class, global coal franchise positioned for growth," said Steven F. Leer, Arch's chairman and chief executive officer. "This transaction will greatly expand our participation in global met markets; provide a powerful platform for future organic met coal production growth; enhance and further diversify our met and thermal coal product slate; extend our operating portfolio into every major U.S. coal-producing basin; and solidify our position as one of the industry's lowest cost producers."

Ben Hatfield, president and CEO of International Coal Group, said, "ICG has assembled a high-quality portfolio of low-cost mining operations and reserves, and one of the industry's most talented and productive workforces. By teaming up with Arch, we expect to realize tremendous value for the shareholders of both companies while ensuring that our operations achieve their full potential."

Financially Compelling Transaction

Arch anticipates that the transaction will be accretive to earnings in 2012. Arch also expects to generate significant free cash flow based on a well-balanced product portfolio of low-cost, high-quality assets that will be sold into structurally under-supplied met markets and growing thermal coal markets. Based on pro forma 2010 financial results, the combined company would have total shipments of 179 million tons of coal, $4.3 billion in revenues and $925 million of adjusted EBITDA, with a balanced split of 50 percent of earnings generated from eastern operations and 50 percent from western operations. Additionally, Arch expects shareholders to benefit from estimated annual synergies of $70 million to $80 million derived from the increased operating, marketing and administrative efficiency of the combined entity.

Further, like Arch, ICG has one of the strongest balance sheets in the U.S. coal industry, with legacy liabilities of just $165 million. At the completion of the transaction, Arch expects its legacy liabilities to equate to just 6 percent of its total enterprise value - a level far below that of other diversified coal companies.

Creating a World-Class Coal Franchise Well Positioned For Growth

Arch expects 2011 pro forma metallurgical coal sales to reach 11 million tons. Over the next three years, Arch anticipates met coal volumes from the combined operations to expand to more than 14 million tons per year, with further opportunities for revenue growth emerging from significant blending opportunities between ICG's low-volatile and rank A high-volatile met coals and Arch's existing rank B high-volatile met products.

"The combination with ICG creates a highly effective platform for optimizing the value of the combined company's met product slate, and for creating entirely new synthetic blends of mid-volatile met coals that command a significant premium in the global market," said John W. Eaves, Arch's president and chief operating officer. "In addition, ICG's Tygart Valley No. 1 met mine, which is currently under development and expected to come online in early 2014, promises a compelling strategic growth opportunity."

Moreover, ICG's predominantly underground reserve base of 1.1 billion tons, nearly 30 percent of which is met quality, provides significant additional opportunities for future coal volume growth. In total, the combined company will have the industry's second largest U.S. reserve position, with 5.5 billion tons. ICG's assets include 13 active mining complexes - and one major mining complex under development - across three coal basins.

The acquisition of ICG also extends Arch's geographic diversity, creating one of the industry's most balanced operating portfolios. With the addition of ICG's operations, Arch will become the only U.S. coal producer with assets in every major U.S. coal supply basin. In particular, ICG's Illinois Basin assets provide a powerful complement to Arch's existing position in this increasingly strategic region, building upon what is already a strong foundation for future growth.

Arch expects to unlock additional value - and expand its participation in global markets further - through the increased utilization of its extensive transportation and logistics network. Arch has dedicated throughput rights at an export facility on the East Coast; access to shipping terminals on the Gulf Coast and West Coast; dedicated and wholly owned terminal capacity on the inland waterways system; and significant barge and mid-streaming capacity under commitment for the movement of coal through the Gulf. "Through this extensive transportation network, we have significant and growing access to high-growth seaborne metallurgical and thermal coal markets in Europe, South America and Asia," said Eaves.

With its unprecedented geographic and product diversity, the combined company will serve an unparalleled mix of customers in the power generation, steel making and industrial markets in the United States and abroad. "We believe this combination will provide tremendous opportunities for creating value for our customers - by offering them the industry's broadest mix of products, the widest range of logistical options and world-class customer service," said Eaves.

Complementary Cultures Focused on Safety, Environmental Stewardship and Shareholder Value

In addition to ICG's high-quality assets, Arch is acquiring a proven workforce: "As a combined company, we will maintain our unwavering commitment to what we view as the three key pillars for success in the U.S. coal industry - safety, environmental stewardship and the creation of shareholder value," said Leer. "We know that the ICG workforce shares these values, and we look forward to working with them to achieve industry-leading results." The current workforce of the combined company totals approximately 7,400 employees.

Financing and Closing Conditions

Arch has obtained committed bridge financing from Morgan Stanley and PNC to fund the acquisition and refinance certain of ICG's indebtedness. The company expects to raise permanent financing comprised of a mix of debt and equity. The majority of this financing would be through debt securities, with the equity portion being sufficient to retain the company's current credit ratings.

The boards of directors of Arch and ICG have each unanimously approved the terms of the transaction agreement. The transaction is structured as a tender offer to be followed as soon as possible by a merger. The tender offer is expected to commence around the middle of May. Shareholders holding approximately 17% of ICG's shares outstanding have agreed to tender their shares in the offer. The transaction is subject to customary closing conditions, including the tender of a majority of ICG shares and regulatory approvals, and is expected to close in the second quarter of 2011.
